Abstract of the Disclosure

A command is provided in a disk drive device that enables the device to read data once, then write it twice, into different locations on the drive. The first location is specified in one embodiment, and an offset to a second location is provided. Once the first copy is written, the second copy is also written to the second location without reading the data a second time.

5